

Sinclair's use of the public airwaves to further a personal agenda is, in my opinion, a corporate criminal act. I trust this company will be dealt with by people bigger than me.

I see my responsibility being to let the sponsors of any broadcast which does not serve the general population as a whole know that it will be my choice to no longer use their products. This is a promise.

I ask the Federal Communications Commission to please see that this type of media ownership is undermining the trust people have in the information coming to them by way of TV and radio and democracy itself.
